That is fine with me. You saw my email of yesterday – no response to that. Up to you if you want to float the specter of seeking sanctions if he fails to show.

Any objection to me sending Marc the following:

The parties and their counsel will be traveling at significant expense to attend the deposition. If you're not going to appear, please so advise.

[EXTERNAL EMAIL]

Michael,

As far as we know, the deposition of Marc Balestrieri is still proceeding tomorrow. Both Kate Klaus and I have emailed him to confirm. He has not responded to either of us, but we are proceeding as if he will be adhering to the agreement entered in court. I know your associate was at the court hearing where the deposition subpoena was served, but I did not get her name/card to include her on this email.

You and/or your colleague is still welcome to attend. While the plan is for most folks to be in person, we are getting a Zoom link for those who cannot travel, and I can provide that to you later today when received. The deposition begins at 8 a.m.

Thanks.
